YEAR 9 ENGLISH – LITERATURE AND CONTEXT

How have Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander literary texts emerged in Australia?

Australian Curriculum Links
English/Year 9/Literature/Literature and Context/ACELT1633

Australian Curriculum Content Description
ACELT1633 Interpret and compare how representations of people and culture in literary texts are drawn from different historical, social and cultural contexts

Australian Curriculum Elaboration
Analysing literary texts created by and about Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples (including documentaries, picture books, print texts and other multimodal texts)

Australians Together Elaborations

The Wound
Our History
Why Me?
Our Cultures
My Response

Essential question
How have texts by and about Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples changed throughout Australian history?

Introduction
This topic provides the opportunity for students to explore how Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples have traditionally been represented in literature in Australia. They examine stereotypes of people and misrepresentations of culture. Students then consider how Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples write about their communities and cultures.
Ideas for student activities

Class discussion
Brainstorm as a class all the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander authors, filmmakers and writers you can think of.

Class investigation
In the school library, ask each student in the class to locate a book by an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander author. Sitting in a circle, take turns showing and introducing each book. If there are insufficient books, ask students to locate a book about Indigenous matters. Discuss the proportions of each during the circle time.
Teacher guidance

Our History

A background to the issue

Below is a summary of the information on the student handout:

- Europeans have long been fascinated with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples' cultures and ways of living. They frequently assumed Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples were inferior, which reinforced negative perceptions.
- Under the system of protection, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples were expected to abandon their languages and cultures. Despite this, traditional knowledge was secretively passed to younger generations.
- Due to ongoing disadvantage, Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people have had limited opportunities to higher education.
- Since the 1960s; when Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander authors, storytellers, songwriters and performers increased in prominence; Indigenous film, theatre, television and literature has emerged with complex representations of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.

Ideas for student activities

Reflection and writing task

Think about the traditional culture of your own family. Is it the same as mainstream Australian culture? If you are non-Indigenous, is there any remaining culture that has existed prior to your family emigrating to Australia? Discuss why/why not. If you are Indigenous, to what extent has your family been able to maintain traditional culture, knowledge and language? Why?

Discussion point

What should authors be aware of when they are writing about people of different cultures?

Research task

Research poet Oodgeroo Noonuccal or activist Charles Perkins. Write an essay about their lives.

Why Me?

Why am I learning this? What do I need to know to understand the issues?

Depending on the interests of your students, and the materials you have access to, create a short collection of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander authored texts for students to examine.

You may choose to include some of the early Black Power-style video texts, and the poetry of Oodgeroo Noonuccal as a point of comparison with more contemporary texts. You could examine song lyrics from influential bands such as No Fixed Address, Warumpi Band or Yothu Yindi.

Oodgeroo Noonuccal's poems are available here: https://www.poetrylibrary.edu.au/poets/noonuccal-oodgeroo/poems

If your school library doesn't yet code or identify Indigenous books, you could discuss with your school librarian ways to make Indigenous texts more visible. You could recommend the following Indigenous publishers:

- Magabala Books https://www.magabala.com

Book report

Read a book by an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander author. Write a review on it.

Comparative analysis

Find a text by a non-Indigenous author and a text by an Indigenous author. Compare how each represents Indigenous culture and peoples.

Poetry text analysis

Read some poems or song lyrics by Oodgeroo Noonuccal or other Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander poets/songwriters. Discuss how effective poetry and popular song is as a form of protest or disagreement with society/government.
Teacher guidance

Our Cultures

Are there any ways that more knowledge of Indigenous cultures can help broaden our understanding of this topic?

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander cultures have oral traditions to keep and share stories, culture and knowledge. Without this system, the culture cannot be kept alive. That's why it's important or Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities to have ways to share knowledge from older to younger generations.

Traditionally in Europe, parts of the world with oral traditions have been regarded as 'prehistoric'. It’s important to have the perspective that oral traditions are not a state of primitivism, but rather a part of a culture that’s evolved differently.

All cultures change over time, and Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander cultures have selected and adapted aspects of other cultures to create modern interpretations and styles.

As Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander authors, storytellers, songwriters and performers have increased in number and prominence, more complex representations of culture and identity have emerged.

Ideas for student activities

Research task

Conduct a search on the National Library of Australia catalogue for texts on the subject of ‘Aboriginal Australians’ between 1788 and 1850. Look through the results. What patterns can you find? What language is used, and what subject matter about Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples is focused on? Write a report on your analysis.

Cultural activity

Find out about ‘yarning circles’. Locate a place outside in the school yard to have a class discussion about Indigenous texts.

Cultural activity

Invite a local Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander author/songwriter or expert on culture to your school (paid for their time, of course!).

This Key Idea concludes the unit and asks students to consider how they would reframe the situation in Australia to bring about justice and equality for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples. There are many ways to respond, including:

- Become a critical reader. When you’re reading a text, think about how the background of the author/s might have influenced how they are writing about groups of people.
- Find texts about Indigenous matters or content that are written by Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples.

Class discussion and debate

How much power and influence does literature have to change perceptions of a group in society? What type of text has greater influence – e.g. film or novel?

Promotional activity

Design a poster for the school library encouraging others to read and engage with Indigenous-authored texts.

Other resources

There are many media articles that describe issues relating to portrayals of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples in literature, and some of the debates that are currently being had in the sector. Conduct a web search to locate recent, relevant articles. For example: Cultural appropriation in literature https://theconversation.com/australia-literatures-legacies-of-cultural-appropriation-103672